

CONTRIBUTORS

Hermina G. B. Anghelescu is a doctoral student at the Graduate School of Library and Information Science, The University of Texas at Austin. She holds a master's degree in languages and literatures from the University of Bucharest, and an MLIS from The University of Texas at Austin. From 1979 to 1992 she worked as a reference librarian, editor, and international relations officer at the National Library of Romania in Bucharest. She has written on international and comparative librarianship for Biblioteca, the Romanian journal of library science, and the IFLA Journal, and on literary criticism and comparative literature for several Romanian literary journals. She has compiled and edited the Libraries & Culture twenty-five-year cumulative index, (1995) and compiled Exteriorica, an OCLC search on monographs about Romania and Moldova published between 1989 and 1993. In addition, she has translated Brooke Sheldon's Leaders in Libraries: Styles and Strategies for Success (ALA, 1991) for publication by the National Library of Romania Press. Comparative and international librarianship and library history are her current areas of interest.

Joseph D. Lewandowski is joint assistant professor of philosophy and literature at Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Missouri. He holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison; two masters degrees, from Boston College and from The State University of New York-Binghamton; and a Ph.D. from The State University of New York-Binghamton. He is the author of The Constellation of Culture: On Method and Truth in Critical Social Theory (forthcoming), and his current research focuses on the social logic of art.

Cheryl Knott Malone is assistant professor in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. She had previously worked as a reference librarian at The University of Texas at Austin, where she received a Ph.D. in library and information science. She is currently writing a book on the Carnegie libraries for African Americans, which were founded during the first two decades of the twentieth century.

Lynne (E. F.) McKechnie is assistant professor in the Graduate Program of Library and Information Science, Faculty of Communication and Open Learning, at the University of Western Ontario, Elborn College, in London, Ontario, Canada. She holds a bachelor's degree in anthropology from the University of Manitoba, an M.L.S. from the University of Toronto, and a Ph.D. in library and information science from the University of Western Ontario. Her interests include library services and literature for children and young adults, and the information-seeking behavior of children.

Amusi Odi is Executive Chairman of the Secondary Education Board in Abakaliki, Ebonyi State, Nigeria, and an associate professor of library studies at the Abia State University, Uturu, Abia State, Nigeria. He holds a B.L.S. and Graduate Certificate in Education from Ahmadu Bello University in Zaria, Nigeria, an M.L.S. from the University of Western Ontario, and a Ph.D. in international and comparative education from the University of Pittsburgh. Within the area of the social context of librarianship, his particular interest is the influence of traditional cultural factors on library development, especially in the Third World.

David Shavit is professor and reference librarian at the Northern Illinois University libraries in DeKalb, Illinois. He holds an undergraduate degree from Howard University in Washington, D.C., and an M.S. and D.L.S. from Columbia University's School of Library Service. He is the author of several books, including Hunger for the Printed Word: Books and Libraries in the Jewish Ghettos in Nazi-Occupied Europe (1997), and has contributed to Libraries & Culture. His areas of interest include library history and the history of reading.